This should come as no surprise -- we are not going to live forever. If you want to make sure your affairs are in order and things surrounding your death are handled properly, News 13's Al Ruechel has a Web site that might help.

The site is called YouDeparted.com. It was put together like many Web sites. After the creator had a bad experience with the death of a loved one, not knowing their wishes or their financial picture, it was quite a mess.

This site helps you put things in order for $10 a year.

Here's what you get:

- Estate Planning: You list the names of your estate planner, living trustee, where to find your will if it isn't on the Web site, and the name of your lawyer.
- Burial Details: How you may want your grave marked, where to be buried. That can create huge problems if you've moved from up north and may want to be buried back there. The way you want you funeral services to be held.
- Finances: There is a section for listing credit cards, bank accounts, stocks, CDs and more.
- Gifts: This is to avoid the family from fighting over who gets what.
- Insurance Policies
- Sending letters to individuals upon your death.
- List of people you want informed upon your passing with a letter explaining why you decided to use the Web site.

If you would like to see this story or other Your Technology stories, just turn to News 13 On Demand at no extra cost. You'll find it on channel 313 on your digital cable.
